The Directive 2006/114/EC concerning misleading and comparative advertising is implemented by Law no. 158/2008 concerning misleading and comparative advertising ("Law no. 158/2008")

The Directive (EU) 2302/2015 was implemented through Government Ordinance no 2/2018 on package travel and linked travel arrangements, which replace the previous GO no. 107/1999 (GO no. 2/2018).

The general enforcement of the Romanian consumer protection legislation is handled by the National Authority for Consumer Protection (NACP) (in Romanian: Autoritatea Nationala pentru Protectia Consumatorului), which is a specialised authority in the central administration, under Government authority and co-ordinated by the Ministry of Economy, Trade and the Business Environment. The NACP acts also as a regulating body with respect to consumer protection and is also competent for receiving administrative complaints. The general website of the NACP can be found at <https://anpc.ro>.

As regards the GEO 34/2014 on consumer rights, on top of the general competence of the NACP, the National Authority for Administration and Regulation in Communications is also competent in relation to infringements of the provisions of this emergency ordinance.

As regards the GEO 14/2011, on top of the general competence of the NACP, The Ministry of Regional Development and Tourism is competent to withdraw the tourism license and may ascertain and inflict administrative sanctions.

As regards Law no. 158/2008, on top of the general competence of the NACP, the Ministry of Public Finance is also competent in relation to infringements of the provisions of the law.

As regards the GEO 14/2011, on top of the general competence of the NACP, the Ministry of Regional Development and Tourism is competent to withdraw the tourism license and may ascertain and inflict administrative sanctions.

As regards Law no. 158/2008, on top of the general competence of the NACP, the Ministry of Public Finance is also competent in relation to infringements of the provisions of the law.

As regards the GO 2/2018, the following authorities may intervene: NACP, Ministry of Economy, Energy and Business Environment, Ministry of Tourism, National Authority for the Protection of the Rights of Disabled Persons, Child and Adoption, The National Agency for Payments and Social Inspection.

Who can file administrative complaints? Can investigations be initiated ex officio?

As a general rule, the administrative complaints can be filed by the consumers who were prejudiced through the violation of the legal provisions. Furthermore, the competent authorities can initiate investigations ex officio.

Under the GEO no. 34/2014 and Law no. 363/2007, the complaints can be filed by any natural persons or by the organisations who have a legitimate interest. Competitors can also file a complaint with the competent authorities.

Under Law no. 158/2008, the traders, the associations and organisations holding a legitimate interest may notify the Ministry of Public Finances or, as the case may be, the National Audiovisual Council. For compliance with the provisions on comparative advertising, the consumer may notify the NACP.

Do any specific The complaints and notifications of the NACP can be made in writing (post), in electronic format or can be submitted personally by the consumer at the head office of the territorial structure of the NACP.

If the complaint is submitted in electronic format (through the internet site of NACP), there is a specific form that should be filled, and which is available on NACP site (<http://reclamatii.anpc.ro/Reclamatie.aspx>). The consumer should also include at least one probatory document (invoice, contract, certificate of guarantee) in relation to its claim and proof that he/she already addressed the professional, in an attempt to directly solve the issue.

If the complaint is submitted personally by the consumer at the head office of the territorial structure of the NACP, the consumer will be requested to fill a Fiche of complaint (according to a standard model established by the NACP's internal general procedure set for the resolution of the consumers claims).

Do the administrative authorities have an obligation to investigate the complaint?

The Romanian legislation transposing the EU Directives on consumer protection does not contain express provisions regarding the obligation of the authorities to investigate the consumers' complaints.

However, according to the general rules, all complaints duly filed with a public authority must be registered, investigated and analysed under all aspects and solved within 30 days. If solving the claim needs further information and a detailed inspection, the term may be extended by 15 days.

The authorities are entitled not to investigate the complaints which are anonymous or insufficiently documented, which contain aberrant information, impertinent, irrelevant, aggressive and offensive language, which refer to acts committed more than 6 months prior to the complaint, which are illegible and/or unintelligible, which are addressed through intermediaries, without proper act of representation, or if the claims are already object of legal proceedings in front of state courts.

Are there any specific requirements regarding the provision of evidence to the competent authorities?

In order for the NAPC to investigate a claim, the complaint made by the consumer should contain information on the products/service acquired, the data of identification of the economic operator and a set of supporting documents (such as cash receipts, contracts, invoices, certificates of guarantee).

During the examination of complaints against a trader, the national authorities may request that the trader provide all the evidence material to the investigation. Failure to submit such information as well as submission of incorrect or incomplete information may lead to a fine.

Pursuant to Law no. 363/2007, traders must produce evidence of the accurate affirmations about the commercial practice exercised and are compelled, upon request of the NAPC or state courts, to make available the documents proving what they asserted. When the documents are not produced within the term established by the claimants or if deemed insufficient, the said affirmations will be deemed inaccurate.

Furthermore, pursuant to Law no. 158/2008, the Ministry of Public Finances or, as the case may be, the NAPC, by their representatives, will request the trader advertising itself to provide all necessary proof about the accuracy of the affirmations, indications or presentations in the advertisement. When the trader fails to produce the requested proof or when such proof is deemed incomplete or insufficient, the affirmations in that advertisement will be deemed inaccurate.

Also, according to the GO 2/2018, in case of controls made by public authorities, the tourism agencies and traders should provide all the requested documents.

According to Law 193/2000, the professionals are obliged to provide to the authorities the original contracts (containing the alleged unfair terms) concluded with the consumers.

II. ENFORCEMENT THROUGH COURT ACTION

Which court actions are available to enforce the Directives?

A general claim for civil damages can be filed before the competent civil courts by the consumers prejudiced by the acts of a trader (in violation of the law).

In relation to Law 193/2000, the consumers are entitled, on the basis of the general civil law norms, to request the competent courts to ascertain the nullity of the unfair terms (directly or by the way of exception); they may also request monetary remedies (reimbursement of the amounts that have been unduly charged by the professionals, damages).

The associations for the consumers' protection may seize the competent courts to order the traders to cease the use of contracts containing unfair terms, as well as to modify the existing contracts by removing the unfair terms. Furthermore, under the same law, the NAPC may also seize the courts with an action for the elimination of unfair terms from contracts concluded by a certain trader.

In addition, under Law no. 363/2007, the National Authority for Consumers Protection may file actions to put an end to unfair commercial practices of traders. All decisions taken by the administrative authorities in relation with the normative acts transposing the Directives may be contested before state courts, which may uphold, modify or annul them.

Who can start a court action?

The court action can be initiated by any person or organisation that proves to have a legitimate interest (generally, a consumer, a consumers' association or the NAPC).

Can court actions be initiated by competitors? The aforementioned Romanian legislation transposing the EU Directives on consumer protection does not cover this aspect. Based on general civil procedural rules, a competitor must prove its direct and legitimate interest in order to initiate a court action.

Can the case be handled through an accelerated procedure?

Under Law no. 363/2007, the action for cease-and-desist is handled through an accelerated procedure. As such, if it is deemed necessary and taking into account all involved interests, in particular the public interest, the court can decide urgently, even without evidence of loss or effective damage or the trader's intent or negligence: (i) cease and desist of unfair practices; (ii) prohibition of unfair practices even if such practices have not yet been carried out, but are imminent; or (iii) send the identification data of the legal or moral person involved in making misleading advertising to the National Audiovisual Council.

The Romanian Code of Civil Procedure regulates a special small claims procedure, that was inspired by the European Small Claims Procedure Regulation, which it resembles significantly. Also, it regulates a domestic order for payment procedure (ordonanța de plată) (articles 1014-1025 CPC). Even though these mechanisms are more frequently used by traders, they can also be used by consumers, when the requirements of texts are met, in order to obtain a rapid payment/reimbursement from professionals

Are there any specific requirements regarding the provision of evidence to the court?

The general rules of evidence under Romanian legislation are applicable in consumer law disputes. As such, any person bringing an action before the competent courts must prove their claims.

Nevertheless, the burden of the proof is sometimes reversed; hence, it will be the professional or the provider of the service that will have to prove the fact regardless of his/her position (claimant or defendant). This is the case, for example, in claims concerning contracts concluded with professionals for the information that must be provided to the consumer (Article 5 GEO 34/2014, art. 8 GO 2/2018), with regard to commercial practices used (Article 11 Law 363/2007), regarding the direct negotiation of contractual terms in standard contracts (Article 4(3) Law 193/2000).

Are there specific procedural reliefs for consumers or consumer associations?

In relation with the infringements of the provisions of the legal acts transposing the European Directives, the consumers/the consumer association may obtain declaratory judgements or judgements ordering a party to cease and desist, interim or interlocutory injunctions (in order to secure the future enforceability of claims and to provide provisional relief).

Where forced execution measures are being undertaken against them, in relation to contracts containing alleged unfair terms, the consumers may file a motion for the suspension of the execution (Article 719 Civil Procedure Code).

According to the GEO 80/2013, there is an exemption from the payment of procedural duties (taxe de timbru) for the disputes regarding the protection of consumers' rights, when the natural persons and the associations for the consumers' protection are initiating legal proceedings against the professionals who prejudiced the consumers' legitimate rights and interests.

III. SANCTIONS

What are the possible civil sanctions and remedies for the infringement of the provisions of the Directives?

The competent civil court can award damages in the framework of a claim for civil damages based on the Romanian Civil Code. These damages, however, should be interpreted as indemnifying measures rather than as sanctions.

Furthermore, under the GEO 14/2011, when the consumer exercises the right to withdraw from the timeshare or long-term holiday product contract, any exchange contract ancillary to it or any other ancillary contract is automatically terminated, at no cost to the consumer.

What are the possible criminal sanctions for the infringement of the Directives' provisions?

There are no criminal sanctions provided for the infringement of the aforementioned Romanian legislation transposing the EU Directives on consumer protection.

Nevertheless, Law 193/2000 accepts that the stipulation of an unfair term may sometimes be a criminal offence and can be sanctioned accordingly (the sanction for falsification of private documents: a fine or prison from 6 months up to 3 years; the sanction for deceit: prison from 6 months up to 3 years).

Also, the GO 2/2008 accepts that, in certain conditions, some facts of the tourism agencies may be criminal offences and may be sanctioned according to the provisions of the Penal Code.

What are the possible administrative sanctions for the infringement of the Directives' provisions?

The violations of the provisions of the laws transposing the EU Directives on consumer protection constitute contraventions/misdemeanours punishable with administrative fines and other complementary measures, irrespective of the nature of the trader (natural or legal persons).

As regards the administrative fines, the national laws provide that the monetary amounts of the fines are revenues for the State or local budget.

As a general rule, the sanctions imposed by the competent bodies must be proportional to the level of social danger of the perpetrated actions. Certain specific criteria are provided under Law 363/2007, pursuant to which the individualisation of the sanction is made according to the gravity and duration of the action, and the sanction must be proportional to the level of social danger of the perpetrated action, taking into consideration the circumstances of the perpetrated action, the manner and means for its perpetration, its purpose, its consequences and the other data in the minutes.

What are the contractual consequences of an administrative order or a judgment on an individual transaction under the Directives?

Under Law no. 363/2007, unfair commercial practices can be terminated by initiating a cease-and-desist procedure. If this procedure is initiated by a competitor who is not a party to the individual transaction with the consumer, the individual transaction will not be affected by a cease-and-desist decision, since a judicial decision only produces effects between the parties to the procedure.

Nevertheless, a procedure can also be initiated under the general rules by the consumer who contemplates that the contract is void because he/she has concluded the contract with a mistaken consent. He/she will thus allege that this mistaken consent originates from inter alia error, fraud or violence. If a competent court concludes that the trader has conducted an aggressive or a misleading commercial practice, the consumer will be able to prove the origin of his/her mistaken consent and thus his contract will be declared void.

According to Law 193/2000 (articles 12(1) and 13(1)), the NAPC may seize the courts with an action against the professionals using standard contracts containing alleged unfair terms. If the courts found the existence of unfair terms, the professional would be obliged to modify the existing contracts and to eliminate the unfair terms from the standard contracts used for future transactions.

Can authorities order the trader to compensate consumers who have suffered harm as a result of the infringement?

Consumers have the possibility of filing a claim for civil damages before the competent courts. Such claim for damages is subject to the general civil rules.

Furthermore, the organisations representing consumers' interests may file a request with competent courts. However, the decisions/ judgements issued in such circumstances are only applicable in the case at hand, and thus, cannot be relied upon by other third parties (e.g., consumers who might also have been affected by the sanctioned practice). Even in such case, damages are awarded on an individual basis.

However, the possibility of organisations to file actions on behalf of consumers does not affect their individual rights. From a procedural standpoint, it is possible for more plaintiffs to file a common court action if the object of such action is a common obligation or if the plaintiffs' rights and obligations have the same cause. Nevertheless, their claims must be individual, and the court will award such claims individually.

Can the administrative authorities or the courts require the publication of their decisions?

Under Law no. 158/2008 and Law no. 363/2007, both the courts and the NACP can require their decisions are published in a widely circulated newspaper.

IV. OTHER TYPES OF ENFORCEMENT

Are there any self-regulatory enforcement systems in your jurisdiction that deal with aspects of the Directives?

CNA - Consiliul National al Audiovizualului (the National Audiovisual Council – NAVC) is an independent regulatory body under Parliamentary control which regulates the field of commercial practices in mass media. It ascertains and sanctions the use of unfair commercial practices in mass media.

ANRE (Romanian Energy Regulatory Authority) intervene to verify if the professionals acting in the field of electric energy, natural gas or thermic energy respect the consumers' rights (for example, refraining from using unfair terms, providing adequate and transparent information, refraining from unfair practices). In case of infringements, the ANRC may also apply administrative sanctions.

ANCOM/Autoritatea Națională pentru Administrare și Reglementare în Comunicații (the National Authority for Administration and Regulation in Communications) is the national authority of regulation and surveillance in the field of electronic communication and postal services. It protects the interests of (electronic) communication users in Romania, by promoting competition in the communications market, managing limited resources, and encouraging efficient investment in infrastructure and innovation.

Consiliul Roman pentru Publicitate/Romanian Advertising Council (RAC) (<https://www.rac.ro/ro>) is a professional, non-governmental, non-profit and independent organisation that established a Code of Conduct in commercial communications. Its main roles are the protection of consumers' interests, the protection of general public interest and the creation of a frame for a loyal competition in the market. The RAC also established codes of conduct regarding the advertising for beer and spirits, the advertising for alimentary products for children, and the advertising for cosmetics products. It examines and solves the complaints related to the eventual violations of the Code of Conduct in Advertising and imposes the respect of the regulations regarding advertising (normative acts and the code of conduct) by its members.

Are there any out-of-court dispute settlement bodies available that deal with aspects of the Directives (e.g., mediation, conciliation or arbitration schemes ombudsmen)?

Following Government Ordinance no 38/2015, on the alternative resolution of disputes between consumers and professionals, some specific ADR entities were created:

SAL ANPC entity (Directorate for Alternative Dispute Resolution of the National Authority for Consumer Protection - https://anpc.ro/categorie/1271/sal_) - may be voluntarily seized by consumers (a model of request for the alternative resolution of the dispute is published on the ANPC site) and solve the cases in an independent, impartial, transparent, rapid and equitable manner; for the consumer, the procedure is free of charge. If one of the parties does not accept the solution proposed, the result of the procedure will not be mandatory, and the consumer will be informed of the available (administrative or judicial) remedies.

In general, after the dispute has arisen (and the consumer's rights are freely disposable), the consumers may conclude mediation or arbitration agreements, in order to solve their dispute with the professionals. The updated list of mediators that may intervene in consumer law cases is held by Mediation Council (<https://www.cmediere.ro/mediatori/>) (law 192/2006).
