Organisation of justice – Judicial systems

Administration of courts

Cyprus was a British colony until 1960 and the legal systems established are based almost entirely on the English legal system and legislation was passed on the basis of the principles of common law and equity.

The legal system which has been in force since the Republic of Cyprus was established retains the influence of the English legal system. The courts of the Republic of Cyprus apply the following laws:

- The Constitution of the Republic of Cyprus (Σύνταγμα της Κυπριακής Δημοκρατίας)
- The laws retained by virtue of Article 188 of the Constitution
- The principles of common law and the principles of equity
- The laws passed by the House of Representatives (Βουλή των Αντιπροσώπων).

Following the accession of the Republic of Cyprus to the European Union in 2004, the Constitution of the Republic of Cyprus was amended so that European law has supremacy.
