Article 103 (1) (e) – Redress procedures against a decision on the application for refusal of enforcement referred to in Articles 61 and 62

The redress procedures referred to in Article 61 are the following:

- when the application for refusal of enforcement is based on Article 39 of the Regulation or other grounds set out in the Regulation – a request for a review of the decision of the Court of Appeal of Lithuania concerning the application for refusal of enforcement, which may be submitted within thirty days of the date on which the decision is served to the party. This request is examined by a panel of three judges of the Court of Appeal of Lithuania. The rules for examining individual complaints apply mutatis mutandis to the examination of these requests. In all cases, the court which examined the request to review the decision on the application for refusal of enforcement gives the decision. This decision becomes final on the day it is given;

- when the application for refusal of enforcement is based on other grounds set out in national law permitted by the Regulation – a complaint about the order of the bailiff concerning the application for refusal of enforcement, which may be submitted to the bailiff within twenty days of the date on which the person filing the complaint became aware or should have become aware of the bailiff's order concerning the application for refusal of enforcement, but no later than ninety days after the date on which the action in question was carried out. The bailiff examines the complaint within five working days of receipt of the complaint and issues an order on it. If the bailiff rejects the complaint in full or in part, the complaint and the bailiff's order is forwarded to the district court with jurisdiction for the area in which the bailiff's office is located at the latest on the working day after the order is issued.

The redress procedures referred to in Article 62 are the following:

- when the application for refusal of enforcement is based on Article 39 of the Regulation or other grounds set out in the Regulation, the decision of the Court of Appeal of Lithuania concerning an application for refusal of enforcement may be appealed in cassation in accordance with the rules governing proceedings in the court of cassation. An appeal in cassation to the Supreme Court of Lithuania may be filed within three months of the date on which the decision under appeal was adopted;

- when the application for refusal of enforcement is based on other grounds set out in national law permitted by the Regulation, a separate appeal against the decision of the district court concerning the bailiff's order regarding the application for refusal of enforcement may be filed within seven working days of the date on which the decision is served to the party. This separate appeal to the regional court is filed through the district court whose decision is under appeal. The decision of the regional court concerning the separate appeal against the district court's decision may be appealed in cassation in accordance with the rules governing proceedings in the court of cassation. An appeal in cassation to the Supreme Court of Lithuania may be filed within three months of the date on which the decision under appeal was adopted.
